Welcome

There are many reasons to purchase a hearth product, and many benefits if you do. We're proud to present you with this copy of HearthWarming. It was designed to acquaint you with the full range of hearth options, and to answer many questions you may have.

Our staff stands ready to discuss your needs.

2 Things To Consider

Begin at the beginning. First, define your needs and your preferences. What type of fuel do you plan on using? Do you prefer cast iron, steel or stone as a hearth product material? Do you want a freestanding stove, a fireplace insert, or a fireplace? And do you want natural venting, direct-venting or vent-free?

Answers to these questions will simplify your decision-making process.

4 Built-In Fireplaces

Whether gas or wood, the profusion of fireplace options has skyrocketed over the past decade. From small to large, and in a variety of colors and styles, there is certainly a fireplace to meet your exact needs.

18 Gas Heaters

Freestanding gas stoves and fireplace inserts offer serious heat and wonderful convenience. Whether attached to a wall thermostat that you set and forget, or operated by a remote control from your favorite chair, gas heaters are incredibly convenient.

26 Wood Heaters

For appearance and ambiance, wood heat just can't be beat. Sure, it's not as convenient as gas-fueled products. You can't just push a button for instant gratification. But, like most things in life, the effort required simply increases the reward.

32 Alternative Products

Take a look at some of the more specialized hearth products. Pellet appliances let you burn waste wood – cleanly. These are the most environmentally responsible hearth products. Then there are cookstoves, coal stoves, oil stoves and electric stoves and fireplaces. One of these options just may be precisely what you want, or need.

36 Hearth Handbook

Let us be your guide, because sizing, placing and installing a hearth product is much more complicated than you may imagine. A mistake many people make is to purchase a unit that is too large for the space to be heated. We can guide you. We can show you where to position your hearth product for the best movement of heat throughout your home. And, of course, we can install it professionally, and safely.

41 The Outdoor Room

From Maine to California, homeowners are creating true living spaces in their backyards – real Outdoor Rooms. There are now wonderful outdoor fireplaces that will keep the evening's chill at bay, and sophisticated outdoor kitchens that rival, or beat, their indoor cousins, and gorgeous patio furniture. Your next vacation could be in your own backyard.

Behind this hand-hammered, wrought-iron face with its antique nickel finish lies a highly sophisticated, direct-vented heating system that will keep your home and family warm even during power outages.
